PUBLISHERS' NOTE.

Since 1885 the Pennsylvania supreme court decisions have been published currently in the Atlantic Reporter, without omission. When the Atlantic was established, a large number of the decisions filed by this court were excluded from the official reports under the provisions of a statute regulating the publication of the Pennsylvania State Reports. For several years, therefore, and until that statute was repealed, the Atlantic Reporter gave the only consecutive and exhaustive report of the judicial decisions which every Pennsylvania lawyer was supposed to know. It still remains the only series giving in one single publication a systematic and inclusive report of the Pennsylvania supreme court since 1885.

The cases thus omitted from the official reports number 1,458. We present herewith a table, together with an index showing the subject-matter of the decisions. In this form we trust it will prove useful to the Pennsylvania lawyer who is compelled to depend mainly upon the official reports, while to the subscriber for the Atlantic Reporter it will afford a concrete proof of the advantages secured by his subscription.

Did you ever think——

Of the advantage which the subscriber to the National Reporter System has over the owner of the State Reports in this single respect:

Cases cited from the State Reports can be readily found in the Reporters

By means of Third Label
Tables and other devices.

WHILE

Cases cited from the Reporters cannot be readily found in the State Reports,

Because no similar devices
for cross-reference are published for the Reports,

Again——

The Reporters contain all the cases in the State Reports,

Giving every opinion in full.

WHILE

The State Reports do not contain all the cases in the Reporters.

The System contains more than 10,000 of these omitted cases already.

Therefore: The Reporters are substitutes for the State Reports.
The State Reports are NOT substitutes for the Reporters.

N. B. Some 250,000 Cases, or About One-Half ... of the Entire Case Law

Of the country, are contained in the National Reporter System.

Systematic Unofficial Reporting

and Unsystematic Official Reporting.

The Reporters were pioneers in the matter of prompt, complete, and inexpensive reporting. This everyone admits. But it was at first generally assumed that the State Reports must in some way have a weight which the Reporters lacked, and this view is still fostered by those whose interests lie in having it prevail. It is therefore not out of place to remind Reporter subscribers of the following facts:

As to the weight of the word "official." The official part of a volume of reports is the utterances of the judges. That is what is authoritative. That is the only part that can be cited as a precedent. If the reporter who prepares the volume for publication misstates the law in his syllabus, the reader may be misled, but no one is bound by this mistake. It is clerical in character. No reporter's work is official in the sense of being authoritative. An "official reporter" is simply one who has been officially appointed; but it has also been officially declared, by legislation and by judicial interpretation, that the publication of the decisions of the courts must be open to all, in the interests of public policy. Every publication of such decisions is therefore official. It may be simply stated as follows: The official work of the courts is published in the National Reporter System, under the official authority given to all publishers. The "copy" is furnished in certified form by the officials of the court,—generally by the same clerk who supplies the court reporter with his copy. The plan (originated by the publishers of the National Reporter System) of publishing two editions enables the judges to first read the earliest published report of their opinions in the advance sheets, and to note any corrections or alterations which may be desired for the permanent, bound edition. These features combine to make the reports in the Reporter System as authoritative as any reports can be. The "official reporter" draws a salary from the public treasury, but his work is not otherwise on any different footing from that of any other reporter of the same official opinions, and the common idea that an "official report" must, because of its name, possess some virtue which compensates for dilatoriness and high price, is due simply to a misconception as to which part of the report is official.

The result which has been achieved in the comparatively few years during which the Reporter System has been before the profession is in itself as strong an argument in its favor as any based upon a direct examination. Being unsubsidized, it must depend entirely upon the support of the profession for its continuance, and that support must be conquered against the prejudice which always, with a conservative profession, operates against anything new and heterodox. Furthermore, the competition of older publishers, whose "Reports" were threatened by these new "Reporters," has been of the keenest. Appeals have been made to the professional prejudice in favor of a past order of things, and the very fact that the Reporters were so much cheaper has been turned against them in arguments addressed to the lawyers who were to do the paying. Yet in spite of argument, competition, prejudice, and lack of any state support, the Reporter System is to-day used by lawyers all over the country, is cited in judicial opinions generally, and is so generally to be found in both public and private libraries that a new text-book which does not give the Reporter citations is acknowledged to be at a great disadvantage. The way in which subscribers look at the system is indicated by the letters collected in the pamphlet, "Over Their Own Signatures."

This position could not have been attained without something in the Reporters themselves which exactly met the wants of the profession. It is not their low price alone, for among subscribers are lawyers to whom the price they pay for a needed tool is the secondary consideration. It is rather that low price, promptness of publication, systematic method and completeness, and uniform excellence have all combined to make the National Reporter System the most serviceable aid which has ever been devised for the lawyer in dealing with the case-law problem. It has been a gradual growth, with nothing forced, spasmodic, or unnatural in its development. It has resulted in a great and prosperous institution, devoted to the service of the legal profession, the permanent excellence of which is guaranteed by the fact that its continuance depends solely on its own merits.

WEST PUBLISHING CO., St. Paul, Minn.

What a set of the Atlantic Reporter gives the Pennsylvania Lawyer.

As to Pennsylvania Reports.

Vols. 1 to 45, Atlantic Reporter, give all the cases in vols. 110 to 193 Pennsylvania State. In other words, they give the equivalent of the latest 84 volumes; that is, 43% of the State Reports, or 33% of the whole set of 259 volumes of Pennsylvania and Pennsylvania State Reports.

Looking at the number of cases, instead of the number of volumes, we find that vols. 1 to 45, Atlantic, contain 10,052 Pennsylvania cases. The 66 volumes of Pennsylvania Reports and 109 volumes of Pennsylvania State prior to the Atlantic contain 17,983 cases. A set of the Atlantic, therefore, gives about 36% of all Pennsylvania Supreme Court cases.

Looking at the present value of these cases, we find that of the Pennsylvania decisions cited by the Pennsylvania courts, as shown by the three latest volumes, 60% are cases included in the Atlantic Reporter.

In addition to the Pennsylvania cases which are also accessible through the state reports, the Atlantic contains 1,458 cases (as listed in this index) which have been omitted from the official reports.

Special front tables enable the subscriber to give the official citation for every decision in the set of Atlantic Reporter which has been reported in the official reports.

As to Other Reports.

Buying vols. 1 to 45 of the Atlantic, you secure, in addition to the Pennsylvania matter, a complete substitute for the following 132 volumes of state reports:

Vols. 53-72 Connecticut.
6 Delaware Chancery.
7-9 Delaware.
78-92 Maine.
64-89 Maryland.

Vols. 64-71 New Hampshire.
41-59 New Jersey Equity.
48-65 New Jersey Law.
15-21 Rhode Island.
58-70 Vermont.
